

“Lest we forget”

Today 75 years ago, in the night of Sunday 22 April 1945 another offensive air patrol to an area around Wilhelmshaven and Hamburg was ordered.....

The Mosquito RS532 YH-E from RAF 21 Squadron took part of this offensive patrol with the objective to attack all German military transport movements.

The Mosquito RS532 YH-E took off from RAF Melsbroek in Belgium on 23 April 1945 02.45 hrs. for a so-called strafing mission to destroy all enemy military road and rail transport in an area south of Hamburg. During this mission, the Mosquito RS532 YH-E was probably hit by a German night fighter or FLAK and the damage was such that the aircraft could not be saved, and on fire.

On its low-level emergency return flight to RAF Melsbroek in Belgium the both crew members were forced by the fire to bail out, but due to the low altitude their parachutes failed to open fully, and they did not survive.

The Mosquito RS532 YH-E and its crew crashed on 23 April 1945 at 05.10 hrs. in Schoonebeek in the Netherlands

G.R. Nowell
Pilot
Canada
KIA

J.A. Haugh
Navigator
England
KIA

Let's keep the remembrance alive of what Flying Officer George Richard Nowell and Warrant Officer Class II John Albert Haugh did for our freedom.

The both crew members of the Mosquito RS532 YH-E are buried in the Commonwealth War Graves section of the Municipal Cemetery at Schoonebeek in the Netherlands.

Rest in Peace.